THE HISTORIC MIAMI RIVER
The Miami River was central to the birth of the City of Miami. Until 1910 the river was the city's main source of drinking water. The word "Miami" is a Tequesta tribe term for "sweet water" which emanated from mill and Miami's small wooden church, which burned down in 1892. The Dade County pine house is a hand-hewn, peg fastened and wood-shingled example of mid-19th century shelters. Development in the 1920s prompted its donation to the Dade Heritage Trust, a private preservation group who undertook relocation and restoration. The City Commission designated the Wagner Homestead a historic site in 1984.
Fort Dallas was built in 1844 as slave quarters in the William English plantation located on the north bank of the Miami River's mouth. It is built from local limestone quarried at that site. After English left for the 1849 California gold rush, the Army reopened "Fort Dallas" on the site in preparation for the State of Florida. Florida Inland Navigation District, South Florida Water Management District, City of Miami and the Downtown Development Authority completed replacement of the site's seawall and in 2011 finished construction of the publicly-accessible riverwalk.
BRICKELL PARK
Brickell Park is named after one of Miami's founders, Mary Brickell. In 1871 the Brickell family had a home on this location, and owned the first trading post in Miami. In 2000 an archeological survey discovered the remains of a Tequesta Tribe burial ground in Brickell Park.
FLAGLER WORKERS HOUSE
Henry Flagler arrived in the late 1800s to build the railroad, the Royal Palm Hotel and other developments. When the hotel was built, he offered ongoing employment by constructing 30 similar houses along what is now SE 1st and Street, between SE 1st and 2nd Avenues. This frame vernacular style Royal Palm Cottage, was constructed in 1897 from native pine with a gabled, shingled roof. The one remaining is the only structure on the site and type in downtown Miami. It has been moved to Fort Dale Park on the Miami River. The City Commission designated the Flagler Workers House a historic site in 1983.
JOSE MARTI PARK
The site was a Native American camp, circa 400 A.D., preserved beneath river bed in the early 1900s. Excavations in 1982 recovered pottery shards, shell tools, projectile points, Native American women's grave and other artifacts. Dozens of similar camps existed along the river, who fled Cuba during the Cuban independence here and poet.
MIAMI RIVER HISTORIC SITES
The River Inn Miami was constructed in 1906. Salvie Jude, restored the National Register of Historic Places and was designated a historic site by the City Commission in 1987.
